

Design Journey

Creativity

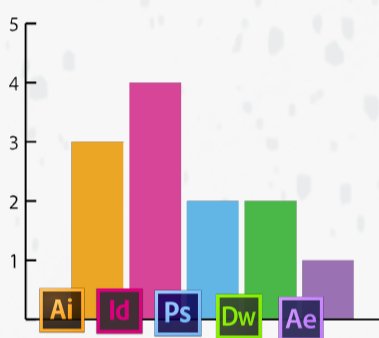

I no longer believe that creativity is something you're either born with or not.

Skill I'd like to develop

During my first year of graphic design, I've discovered my interest in photography.

Tool skills

My skill level using the tools needed for graphic design is still quite low. This is something I'd like to improve on this year.

My flaws

I have a horrible work flow, and no system in my files. My desktop is always messy.

Creative risk taking

Artist statement:

In graphic design as well as in life, I have yet to find an identity. I am very drawn to the clean and minimalistic, but it often feels as a safe choice. I am also inspired by the very complex designs, but at this point I'm still in the very early stages of learning. Although in this field you never done learning. This year I will suck up all the inspiration I can find. I will organise it and I will allow myself to take risks even though they might fail.

As for the future. Digital nomads are getting more and more common. I will start my own photography & graphic design company, as my dream is to be location independent. It gives me the freedom to live places where I can feel inspired, whether it's being surrounded by nature or likeminded souls.
